NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK July 28.—The stock market dropped back into a rut today and drifted sluggishly on small transactions for several individual stocks which were influenced by special causes. The fact that yesterday's upward movement was stopped in itself made bears among the traders, although it was attributed to sympathy with the sharp break in sugar. Sugar continued to be the center of interest today, and speculation in it was very feverish, the price vibrating above and below yesterday's close over a range of two points.

terday's close over a range of two points.

The feverish tone was due to doubts as to whether the recently formed pool had finished its campaign against the shurts. The bears at one time forced the price down to 1.37, but there was evidence of support and a substantial rally drove them to cover. In the railread list the publication of the June statement of St. Paul earnings showing a decrease in net of over $20,000 by reason of increased operating expenses forought out considerable offerings of the grangers. Declines were in all cases, however, limited to tractions. With money so plentiful here a further expansion of the currency by gold imports is felt to be of doubtful advantage.

WAR FOR MARKETS,
(Detroit Free Press.)

A war for market would be not only harbarous and infamous, but wholly unnecessary. Let us bear in mind that the tariff discriminations imposed upon Cuba have constituted one of the counts in the Indictment we have brought against the island's oppressors. History has shown that American genius invention and industry can prevail the world over without force or favoritism. Our industries require only an equal chaince with the rest.

SURE SIGN OF INTOXICATION

SURE SIGN OF INTOXICATION.

A Young Wife's Experiment and the Sure Proof thut Followed. (New York Sun.)

They had only been married three short months, but one day she made a fearful discovery. On a particular excining when he came home she was completely startled when she fancied she detected the odor of liquor up. n him. At first she held her breath she was so frightened. But at length it slowly but irrefutably dawned upon her. She was almost dazed. Still, and when all indications pointed that way, she refused to believe, and as a list straw she asked him if he had not been to the barber's. He replied that he had not. Therefore, at last even by run had to be given up. She did not have the heart to tax him with it that evening. She trusted him ever so much, and she thought how chagrined she would be if she should preced on her suspicions and they should turn out to be wholly inaccurate. She resolved to wait, but in the meantime she set about devising a plan whereby she could establish upon any future occasion, heyond cavil, just what the truth was. She thought over a great many ideas and ways and means, but came across nothing satisfactory. Just at this juneture a dear friend came in. To her, after a great deal of preliminary cautioning, she revealed the awfulness of her situation. The very dear friend sympathized heartily and fervently with her in the terribe calanity, but she suggested that it would be a good plan, as the first had observed, to be perfectly positive before confaunding him with its guilt. On being interrogated as to a plan, she repided that she had always heard it said, and she believed such to be quite the case, that a man even slightly intoxicated could not, pronounce words of any length. Her friend was immensely gratified at this idea, which she also averred to have often heard and to retain perfect faith in. Thereupon it was agreed that the bride should make out a list of words and keep them always at hand, ready for use in an emergency.

As soon as her friend had gone she got down an una made out a list that she thought world give the matter a fair trial. At iast, in a Couple of weeks, she felt sure again one evening that her husband did not seem just exactly as he generally did. She made no attempt to contain herself any longer, but immediately asked him to read the words she had collected. Her friend happened to call the next day. The young wife was in a state of great agitation and collapse.

"Yes, yes," she sobbed hysterically, "It was just as I thought."

Here a fresh dood of tears checked her utterance. Presently she was able to proceed.

her utterance. Presently she was able to proceed.

"I gave him this list." she continued Here she handed it over to her friend It ran. Phthisis, paylactery, photo-chromy, hypechondriasis, multi-prity parachronism, phenakistoscope, ples-iosaurus, pocceurantism, diatessaron antinomianism, pseudaesthesia.

"And," she went on while the friend was reading it, "he missed nearly half."

dory led the way. It was the assassin dory, and in it in simple state lay the man it had killed.

Up through the churchyard into the plain church the man was carried in this strange bier. There he was laid before the pulpit while the minister said over him the prayer for the dead. The freezing grave was ready. In it John Jacobsen was buried. No longer will be risk the gale or the ice. The dory that had shain him was his coffin, and the cold earth of warm hearted Iceland has covered both man and boat in an eternal peace.

THE MAN IN HIS HOME.

The Bushand and Father Strikes the Keynote For Right or Wrong Living.

"The Seclusion of a home gives to a man a certain freedom and attendant privileges which no other place in the world affords, and it is right that it should," writes Edward Bok of "The Man It His Home" in The Ladies Home Journal. "But it is not right that this freedom and those privileges should be abused to the disadvantage of the wife. Too many men seem to have the idea that they can drop into constant disconsolare and churlish moods at home with their wives which in any other place and by any other person would not be tolerated. It is when a man is within the walls of his home that he is himself. Then it is that he should be at his best. When a tunn gives the best that is within him to those closest to him, his home will be the ideal place that he wishes it to bu.

"No man has a right to expect from his wife what he on his part does not give her. If he wants her sympathy, he must give her his consideration. If a man lacks the clement of consideration, he should cultivate it, and cultivate it not for the benefit of his friends, but for those in and of his home. Consideration should begin at home, not in the homes of februis, as it so often loes, and ends there too. The atmosphere which a man creates in this home by example becomes the rule by which his children live. The husband and father strikes the keynote for right or wrong living."

The Spanish Royal Standard.

The Spanish royal standard is most complicated. The red and yellow of the Spanish flag is said to be derived from this occurrence: In 1978 Charles the Bold dipped his fingers in the blood of Geoffrey, count of Barcelona, and drew them down the count's golden shield in token of his appreciation of the latter's bravery. The shield, so marked, became the arms of Barcelona, which became part of Aragon, and its arms were taken by that kingdom. Now to the royal standard: In the first quarter or upper left hand part of the flag are the arms of Leon and Castile, the lion and the castle. The second quarter is taken up, one-half by the arms of Aragon, one-half by the arms of Aragon, one-half by the arms of Scily. The upper third of the third quarter—directly under the first—shows the Austrian colors. The lower two-thirds is divided between the flag of Burgundy and the black lion of Flanders. The upper third of the fourth quarter shows the checkers, another Burgundian device, while the lower two-thirds is shared by the red eagle of Antwerp and the golden tion of Brabant, and on the top of all this are two shields, one showing the Portuguese arms, the other the French fleur-de-lis. Considerable of a flag that.—Philadelphia Times.

Neither Hash Up Nor Shut Up.
Recently a young lady was heard to say to another "Hush up!" The person addressed replied: "Nobody but a Virginian would say "hush up. "Shut up' is the proper expression." The Virginian stood corrected, and her critic, rejoicing in her superior culture, rathed on as before. But neither, it appears, was exactly right. "Hush" would be proper, as this means be silent, but "shut up" is inelegant. "Shut up" has some colloquial use, but no one with pretensions to real culture would employ the expression, since it suggests rudely the closing of a wide open mouth. Virginians commonly use pretty good English and must be criticised with care.—Baltimore Sun. Neither Hush Up Nor Shut Up.

"Isn't there something in my policy," asked a caller at a La Saile street insurance office the other day, "about my having to 'report any change of residence?"

"Yes, sir," said the man at the nearest desk, picking up a pen. "Where have you moved to?" "I haven't moved anywhere," rejoined the caller, "I have made a change in my residence by painting it a light straw color and putting a jack on the kitchen chimney. I think that's all, Good day."—Chicago Tribune.

DR. FRANKLIN IN FRANCE.

The American Envoy Was Received With the Highest Honors at Court.

Mr. II. A. Orden writes of "A Great Republican at Court" in St. Nicholas, After telling of the arrival of Benjamin Franklin in France Mr. Ogden says:

He was then over 70 years of age, and his fame as a printer, editor, inventor, philosopher and statesman—for the old gentleman was a many sided gentlema—was well established. The learned societies of the civilized globs were proud to enroll his mame among their members. The French people, from the mobiles down to the servants, all were familiar with his quaint and witty sayings, as translated from "Poor Hichard's Almanae," as well as with his love of likerty and his broad sympathy with his fellow men. Silas Deane, the agent of the American congess, then Inving in Paris, afterward said, "Here is the bero, philosopher and patriot who as the age of 71 risks all dangers for his country."

To show that the enemy fully realized v Newport News 8 00a r Richmond 10 15a the here, philosopher and patriot who at the age of 74 risks all dangers for his country."

To show that the enemy fully realized lia power as an advocate for the enuse of independence, the Marquis of Rocking ham, one of King George III's advisers remarked that he considered: the presence of Dr. Franklin at the French court more than a balance for the few additional acres which the English had gained by the conquest of Manhattan Island." This was said not long after the battle of Brooklyn, whereby General Howe had secured possession of New York.

Shortly after his arrival in Paris the doctor was invited to make his home at Passy, then one of the little towns outside of the city, although now it is inside of the fertilications. Here on a hill overbooking the river Seine as it flows past villages, chateaux and palaces, stood the Mansion Velentinois, the owner of which his sted on Franklin's sharing his apartments with him without cost, saying, "If your country is successful in the war and your congress will grant me a small piece of land, perhaps I may take that as payment." Wherever the doctor went crowds followed him. He was cheered in the streets or at the opera. His sayings were quoted, and engravings, miniatures, medals, smuffbox lids and souvenirs were made to lear his kindly features. He wrote home to little Bujanin's nother that they had "made her father's face"—by which, of course, he meant his own—"as well known as that of the moon."
